

PROJECT OVERVIEW

At the New Urban Challenge designer show home in Orlando, the interior style is bright and sunny. Dozens of windows bring light into the home, with Fypon trim framing each window. Impressive mouldings, interior door surrounds and millwork create a cottage-style environment that's both comfortable and welcoming.

Before Bill Kreager started designing his Shingled Cottage-style show home, the Seattle architect spent days walking through Orlando neighborhoods for inspiration. “Floridians seem to crave individual characteristics in their homes and lots of detail work,” according to Kreager, principal of Mithun. “We accomplished that with specifically defined rooms and an abundance of millwork.”

EXTRAORDINARY SHOW HOME

To accent his design, Kreager selected Fypon urethane millwork for the interior and exterior of the home. “Fypon products were ideal for this project. The pieces are extremely durable and easy to fabricate into everything from wall accents to ceiling beams to shelving. Wherever you turn in this home, you’ll see bright white millwork details that draw the design together ... window surrounds, mouldings used on mirror walls, mantel surrounds and balustrade systems.”

Ideally suited for high humidity areas like Florida, urethane millwork has the advantage over wood because it refuses to warp or split. The durable products resist weather damage and insect infestations, and provide long-lasting beauty. Low-maintenance Fypon products arrive at the job site requiring no sanding, priming or sealing, making installation fast and easy.

“The versatility of the Fypon products and wide selection impressed me tremendously,” says Kreager. “Using the same products for interior and exterior applications gave the design consistency. And, having more than 6,000 pieces to select from made me feel like a kid in a candy store!”
